

Dr. Michael Moore

With over three decades of higher education experience in both the classroom and in higher education administration, Dr. Moore's passion is to broaden access to high-quality, affordable and relevant education. As a first-generation college student, he appreciates the transformative power of a college education and he strives to provide that opportunity to others. Dr. Moore is currently the Vice President for Academic Affairs for the University of Arkansas System where he works with their 18 colleges and universities to broaden student access and success. A significant amount of his work in recent years has focused on innovative strategies that eliminate barriers to student success. His experience in building, launching and leading innovative online degree programs, including building a new university from the ground-up, has provided opportunities for students to realize their academic dreams.

Prior to his work in Arkansas, Dr. Moore served as senior vice provost and dean of undergraduate studies at the University of Texas at Arlington with responsibility for undergraduate student success and strategic development of online programs.

Dr. Moore earned a bachelor's degree in political science from Washburn University and a master's and doctorate in the same from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.
